Because of an error, the communist Giuseppe Zaccherin, man who lives of cheating, separated from his wife and with lover, finds himself enrolled in the lists of Christian Democracy. Convinced to run as much by the party mates as by the fascist exponents, who deem it harmless, Zaccherin presents himself but is elected by surprise by the citizens, who see in him a man different from the current political class. As a senator, the only way to neutralize him is to appoint him President of the Republic.
